Description:
A warning symbol or warning character for different hazard types used in a hazard symbol. In safety, symbols are often incorporated in a warning sign to indicate that a hazard or risk may exist. The symbol can also be included in a hazard statement in a hazard communication label or in a hazard notice or hazard warning in a safety report or hazard communication label. The symbol can also be used in a hazard warning or hazard notice to indicate that a hazard may exist.

Product Element: A product element is a component of a product that might affect its performance or safety. It can be a physical part, a software module, or a document that provides instructions for using the product. In insurance, the product element is the specific coverage or benefit that the insurance company offers. For example, an insurance company might offer a coverage for medical expenses or a coverage for property damage.
